Dear fellow artists,

CALL ME RIDICULOUSLY GIDDY over this announcement from the CDC, that “Fully vaccinated people no longer need to wear a mask or physically distance in any setting, except where required by federal, state, local, tribal, or territorial laws, rules, and regulations, including local business and workplace guidance.” A step in the right direction perhaps? We should be able to move forward with in-person meetings. We are working on another outdoor location for early June, and a July picnic. We should have other options for the fall, but feel free to make suggestions.

Meanwhile, we are looking forward to the next Art Crawl over Memorial Day weekend. At this point we should have all the information out there. Lots of work! Please support your fellow artists by sharing the Artist Index and Map on social and other media. Hoping for great weather!

I am finally in a bigger studio at the brand-new location of the d'Art Center in Norfolk. I'm there Monday – Friday most weeks between 11am and 5pm. Please come visit and introduce yourself. Slowly starting my ARTest Kitchen web series and have posted a 90-day art challenge, “A Big Year,” which includes painting and sculpting birds of various species for which you should beat my goal of 24+. Visit me at Facebook.com/tutoringart for more details. #artestkitchen

Let's get busy, busy making art. It's so much fun!

“PELICAN SPLASH” BY VIVIAN DAVIS

Sam Hundley Scrap artist
<https://www.samhundley.com>

AFTER A successful career as a newspaper artist/designer, Hundley, 62, found his true calling in retirement. The current CBAA Newsletter Chair makes folk art assemblages using found objects that he collects from junk yards, roadsides and beaches.

His first children's book, "Gifts of the Magpie," was released in March and his second, "Tag and the Magic Squeaker," is due out in the spring of 2022.

When did you first realize that you're an artist?

For 39 years I was happy to call myself an illustrator. Creating editorial art on deadline for publication was fun and I loved it for most of that time. In 2009, when I began creating scrap art for the fun of it – that was when I started thinking, "I guess I'm an artist..." – at the ripe old age of 51.

Why did you choose your particular medium?

I always daydreamed and saw faces and animals in the clouds and drapery patterns and that creative shorthand became second nature over time. As I became disillusioned with editorial illustration (it had become a joyless exercise in explanatory hieroglyphics), I started looking around a lot – searching for a creative outlet – and I saw interesting shapes everywhere, hiding in plain sight. It stimulated my imagination. So I began picking stuff up and eventually, that became the basis of my personal folk art.

What is your creative process?

I collect objects that I think are intrinsically beautiful or interesting, and later, as I sift through the heap, while keeping an open mind, objects start to connect in my subconscious and I just play around with the shapes, not knowing where it will lead. The results often surprise me, which makes it fun. I arrange and rearrange the objects until it looks right, at which point I use Goop adhesive, nails, screws, bolts, wire – anything but welding – to bond the pieces together.

Who influenced you the most?

My parents, who taught me the importance of having fun and improvising; my friends, who encouraged me to be confident; Mark Fisher, a master scrap artist who demonstrates the power of simplicity; and Picasso, Hopper, The Meat Puppets, Peter Hoey – all of whom start with a narrative – the most inspiring art tells a story.

"BUZZ ALDRIN" BY SAM HUNDLEY

What advice would you give a beginning artist?

Art isn't easy, but it shouldn't be a constant struggle either. Do what you enjoy while continuing to search and experiment. Be prolific. Binge on the art that you truly love (quality in, quality out) – music, sculpture, literature, graphic design, movies, photography, fashion, architecture, science, food, whatever. Follow your desire. Then ask yourself, "What is it about this song/painting/film in particular that speaks to me? Why do I love this? And why does this other thing leave me cold?" This honest, subjective analysis of your personal taste is the code for unlocking your true mission as an artist and for creating a distinctive style – because no two people are exactly the same in their artistic preferences. Also, you have no idea what you will be doing in 5 years, so prepare by concentrating on general improvement of mind, body and spirit.

What are you working on now?

A large skeleton made of a weathered, louvered door; Gabriel blowing his horn, made of a discarded chair and architectural gingerbread; a relief print of local smut peddler and provocateur Bootsie Goldstein made with inked impressions of found objects; a baby mammoth made of a tarnished watering can; and always intending to clean my studio but getting easily distracted ...

What are your hopes for the future?

I hope to stay healthy and keep a sense of humor. I hope to find more sources of interesting junk. "Finding" is 80 percent of what I do.

Kathy Bruce Painter

AT A YOUNG AGE Kathleen knew that she looked at things differently. In elementary school she displayed this in her art projects. The teacher took notice of her different approach and she was awarded lessons from Toledo Art Museum. The lessons were several days each week for an extended period of time and Kathleen's mother told her that it was impossible to find the time to drop her off and pick her up. Kathleen's mother instead enrolled her in charm school with her older sister. She promptly flunked out of charm school.

In high school, Kathleen continued to excel as an artist. She sold several paintings and was encouraged to apply for college scholarships. During this time, she met her true love and married him shortly after graduation. For the next thirty years she enjoyed art as an observer only, but she longed to resume creating art. Kathleen again started painting approximately 19 years ago and has continued to explore new ways of expressing her unique vision of the world. As a member of the CBAA, she has won numerous awards, including most recently, First Place at the 2021 Spring Members Show. See story, Page 6

When did you first realize that you're an artist?

I was in first grade when a teacher noticed my "different way" of drawing and using paints in art class. I've always loved patterns, colors and movement.

Why did you choose your particular medium?

During high school in a sculpting class we used polymer with tissue paper. When I started back painting about 20 years ago, I remembered what fun it was to use with all different textures.

What is your creative process?

My creative process involves, music (mostly Jazz ... love the pauses), science, doing puzzles, and the natural world. I love to look at the colors in between tree branches and the intricate designs in insect wings and spider webs.

Who influenced you the most?

Jackson Pollock ... recently Jenny Grevatte and Amanda Richardson.

What advice would you give a beginning artist?

Live a full life so you have something to share.

What are you working on now?

Right now I'm finishing up a painting of an old barn. It's from a photo I took up in Michigan. I'm also getting ready to try out some new powdered metallic paints.

What are your hopes for the future?

My hope is to continue to play with paints and inspire and be inspired by fellow artists. And whirled peas ...

38 ARTISTS DISPLAY OVER 114 WORKS AT NORFOLK'S GALLERY 21

THE 58TH SPRING Members Show was a success. Thirty-three members participated in the show, along with 5 area high school students. The show was hosted by Gallery

21, a premier art gallery located in the heart of Norfolk. Vinnie Bumatay, a Virginia Beach painter/sculptor, was the show judge. He took great care in evaluating over 114 works of art. His ribbon presentation at the opening was entertaining and informative, as he spoke with the artists about their styles and thought processes.

I would especially like to thank Susan Vertullo, the publicist at Gallery 21, who generously worked with our exhibitors to refine and edit their Artist Statements, which were made available to viewers. Thanks also to members Gina Buzby, Alan Rickman, Sam Hundley and Vanessa Golson for helping out during the exhibit.

I'm pleased to announce that next year's show will be hosted by The Suffolk Center for Cultural Arts.

Congratulations to the winners, keep on creating and have a wonderful summer.

OVER 60 ARTISTS AND CRAFTERS AT 21 LOCATIONS
WELCOME VISITORS ON SELF-GUIDED TOUR

THE CHESAPEAKE BAY ART ASSOCIATION 2021 Spring Art Crawl welcomes visitors to meet artists and peek inside their creative workspaces, including the BRAND NEW locations for the d'Art Center and Working Artist Studios in the NEON District. Visit Galleries with multiple artists in both Norfolk and Virginia Beach as well as individual art studios and outside tents. This is a free, self-guided driving tour including a numbered Artist Index and Google Map. "Our first ART CRAWL last October was a breath of fresh air during the height of the pandemic, and this time around our artists are even more excited to show you their creative accomplishments during the last year," said CBAA President and organizer, Vivian Davis. "Patrons will have an opportunity to buy original artwork and handmade creations in a variety of media much like the last event which remains consistent with current health guidelines."

The tour is numbered with stops in Ocean View and East Beach, to the suburbs north of and including the eclectic NEON District in Norfolk. The stops continue east to the Virginia Beach Oceanfront via some cozy neighborhoods and end just north of the VIBE Creative District. It's easy to plan your tour route from any location using the Google map with location numbers and Artist Index which are available by visiting us on <https://www.facebook.com/ChesapeakeBayArtAssociation> and you can read a little more about the artists on our Facebook Event page, <https://www.facebook.com/events/296700882058980>, or you can request a digital copy of the map and index by emailing CBAAMembership757@gmail.com.
